The VMT students would like to thank all of our instructors. Without their dedication, knowledge, support and especially their patience, we would have never gotten as far as we have. Thank you, Dr. Porterfield for your leadership and guidance. Thank you, Dr. Kuder for your time and effort. Thank you, Mrs. Robinson for your caring and devotion to the profession. Thank you, Lori for your knowledge and your lightheartedness, which lifts our spirits. Thank you, Kim and Sally for your behind-the-scenes efforts and friendship. Thank you, Mr. Bradford for helping us succeed.

We would also like to send a special thank you to the animals which tirelessly give of themselves. In order to teach us the lessons we need to learn, these creatures have willingly (sometimes not so willingly) taken many pokes and prods. Without them we would not receive the superior education which will make us superior technicians.

Thank you - now and always.

WITH GREAT APPRECIATION

Vogue.

Doggone tired.

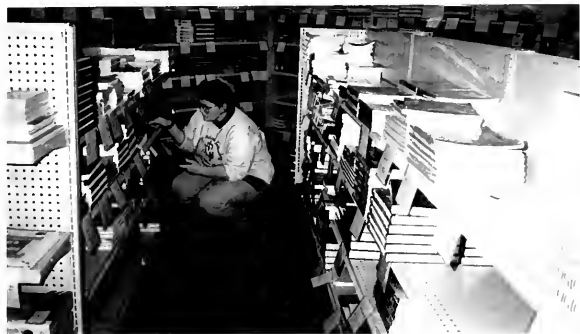

Who let the animals out?

Where did you say this goes?

Terri, AKA Vanna White, shows off our state of the art autoclave.

This book costs how much?

Did somebody say McDonald's?

A stitch in time.

It's all a part of the job.

Tara has an antelope on her mind.

A typical Vet Med student:
dazed and confused.

Cindy is feeling especially ethereal today.

Sioux had a bad face day, but she danced anyway.

Are you sure about that?

Talk to the right hand!

Straight from the horse's...well, you know.

Ted stops studying long enough for a good workout.

Home, home on the range...

"It's not LEGAL to test us like this!"

Barbara and Allison perform a physical.

Where did that little booger go?

Who, me?

Breaktime!

Dr. P is up to something.

This is my color, don't you think?

Joanna awaits her Prince.

We all have our rainy days.

We're all perfectly innocent.

When bobbing for apples, Kelly felt all washed up.

Dr. Kuder, I think Angelika is feeling some stress.

Blankets! Towels! This is almost like Christmas!

Mr. Bradford and his granddaughter picnic with the Vet Med students.

Sure doesn't taste like apple and tuna fish.

A lot of kids were terrorized for this candy.

Lori's and Mrs. Robinson's office is always so neat.

"Think long and hard before you snap that picture."

Chemistry is everything, including your camera.

Is it cold in here or is it just me?

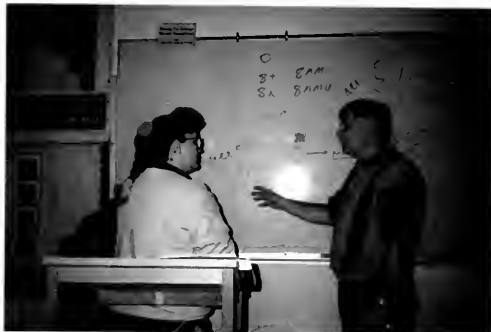

Mrs. Robinson's version of "Singing in the Rain."

Heh Heh Heh Heh

Bend over Jennifer!

You need to study at least two hours a night for this class.

I think Sally needs some Ace.

Thanks for the birthday present, but we're still having lecture.

Take out for Simon.

If it's not on the disk, I can't find it.

Callie the cat wishes she could read what's on the bottles.

Show us your form, Mr. B!

For the last time, this is not a dalmation!

Graduate Thank You's

I am very thankful and proud to have been a student of this program. There have been many tough times, but my classmates especially Valerie, Terri, JoAnna, Michele and Tonia helped me through and made me laugh. Thanks to the wonderful instructors who were always patient and helpful. Best of luck to all of you.

Petra Guity

I would like to thank my friends Terri, Petra, Valerie, Tonia (who couldn't be here this year), and especially JoAnna for helping me get through these two years by helping me study and for all the fun and laughter we had, mostly laughing at ourselves. I would like to thank all the instructors for a great job. I would especially like to thank Lori for always having time and patience with me and never losing it. I would like to wish the best of luck to all my classmates, wherever you may go. Most of all I would like to thank the Lord for getting me through these past two years.

Michele Kendall

I would like to thank my friends, Valerie, Terri, Petra and Michele for the wonderful friendship and great times together. You've made the last two years a lot easier for me. I can't begin to tell you what it has meant to me. I want to thank all the instructors for your hard work, support, and patience. Thank you, Dad and Susan, for supporting and loving me. Most of all I thank God for his many blessings of friendship and love. I wish the best for all my classmates. May your future be bright and your load be light.

It has been said that kindness is more important than wisdom, and the recognition of this is the beginning of wisdom. Remember how you treat others who have an inferior knowledge or skill and pray that when you go to work with those of superior knowledge and skill, your mistakes and shortcomings will be looked upon kindly. This encourages wisdom. God bless and keep my fellow classmates. Thanks to my instructors, my family, Steve Calwell, and above all my Lord.

Miranda, Dana, Becca, Janet and Alison H, we made it. I am glad we became good friends. This last year has been a blast. Lets all keep in touch.

Love you all, Alison M.

Miranda, we had some good times and bad ones but we did it. Good luck with all you do and have fun with life. And most of all never forget that night at the old apartment.

How does that go? Righty-tighty...lefty-loosey.

Laughter, the best way to forget what's at hand.

Reporting to you live (barely) from behind the scenes.

Did somebody say something about getting tutored?

Let's see...fingers, fingers, palm, palm,...Is Dr. P watching this great technique?

Dr. Kuder gets acquainted with her incoming second year students.

Mr. Bradford wows the ladies.

Barbara's not the gullible type, but then she doesn't think I'm sneaky either.

Let's eat, drink, then cancel classes.

Bosom buddies.

And so, as I was scanning the microscope I saw this larger wiggly thing...

Wish we might, wish we may, pass the test we take today.

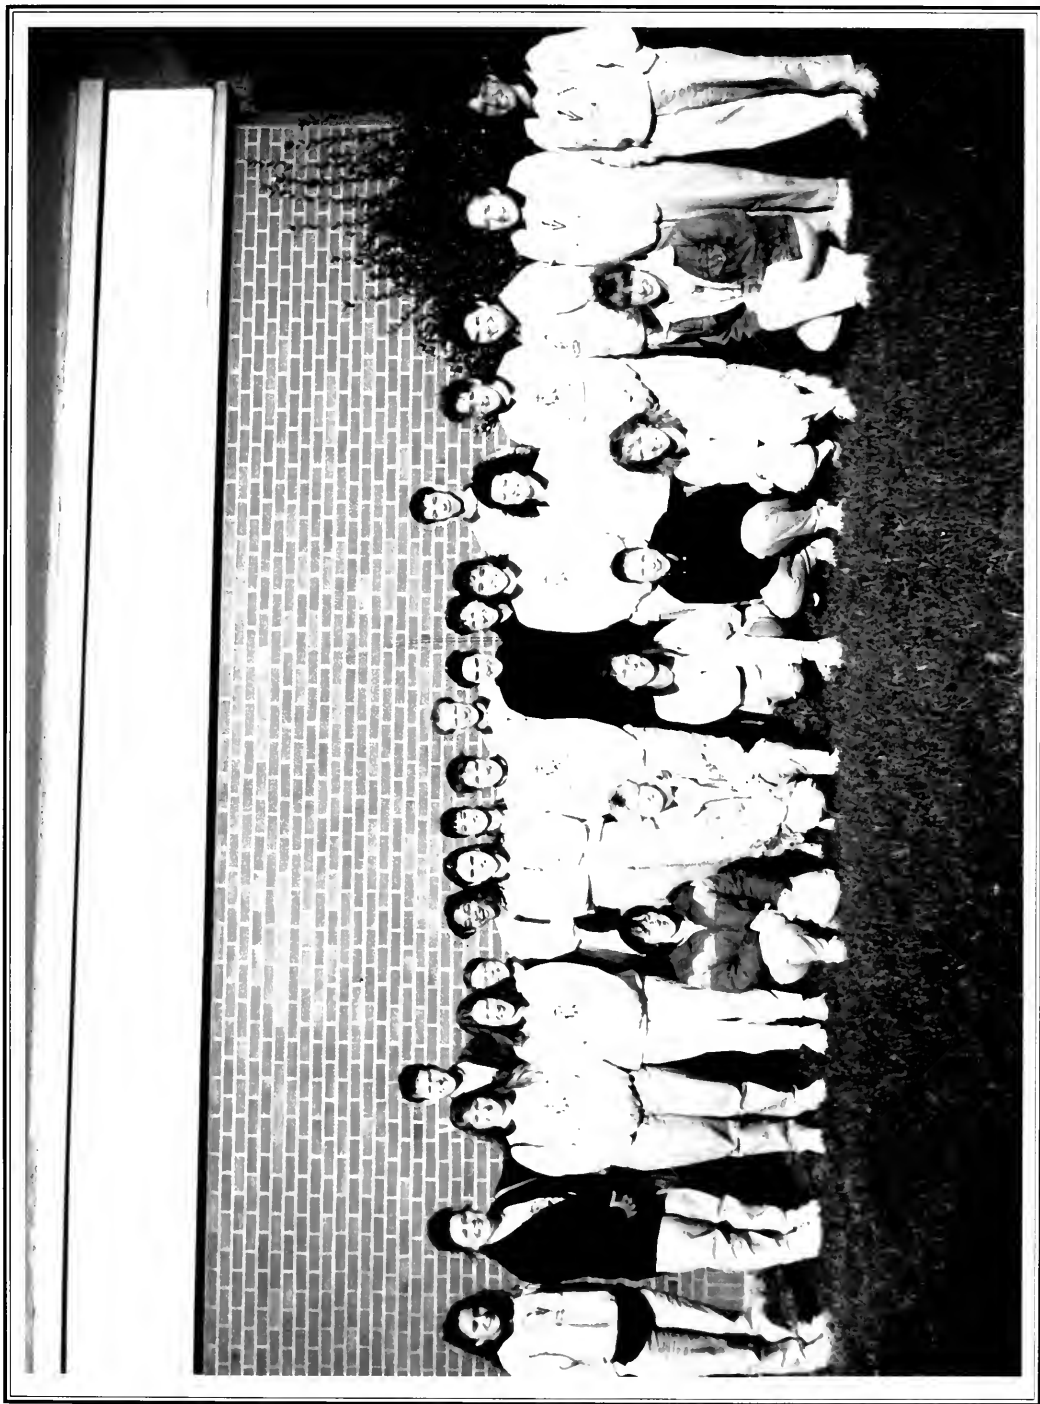

Ohhhhh, really!

First year students helped clean up after the 1st and 2nd year lunch.

Angelika and Buddy keep each other warm.

Sioux, Laramie, and Hydra Isgett.

Halo and Duke Guity enjoy life together.

I wonder where Kelly's been keeping herself lately.

Marie squeezes in while Isis squeezes out.

Me and my shadows.

Sam and Mel.

Jannie, where are you? I'm hungry!

Be honest Cindy, who's really doing your homework?

Now this is getting out of hand.

Spider doesn't mind a good hug now and then.

Theresa shares her love with Billy and Max.

E T Intubation Lesson #1: How to get the instructor to do your work for you.

What are these? Where do they go?

Nuts! I hate doing this!

Now here's the needle and that's the dog.

No dumping zone.

Lab story time: "Once upon a time there was a beautiful young technician named Nancy..."

This was not in the brochure.

His ear twitched, give him some more ace.

I'm so good I can do it with my eyes closed!

Stop the presses: Dana has a serious moment.

Sally's little bundle of joy.

Is that camera sterile?

Through the teeth, over the gums, look out trachea here it comes!

Coprophagia in action!

We have no idea what we're doing.

Thank God it's his and not MINE!

Ha! Ha! Who said there was going to be an Easter this year?

Another hard day of playing and eating.

I wonder if this is how Dr. Frankenstein started?

There's a camera, look like you're having fun!

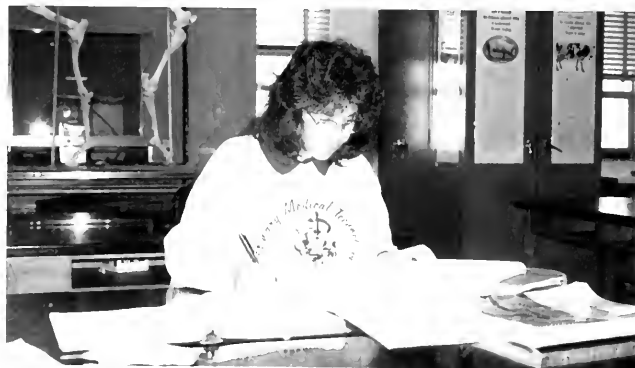

Are the computers really necessary?

Shae and Erin ponder the mysteries of anatomy.

Laura must've made an A on that anatomy test!

Susan never stops!

Mindy looks on as Laura tries to get that chemistry.

All smiles...TODAY!

Nicole catches a nap between labs.

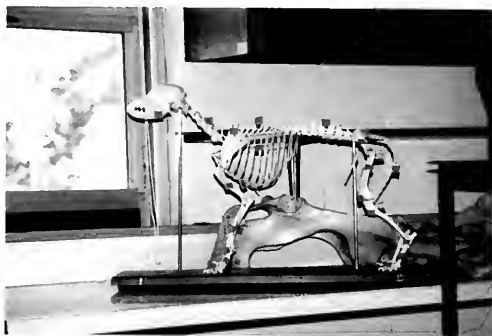

Fine French cuisine.

In the fantasy world, we all graduate!

Uh...do you understand this?

No bones about it, anatomy is tough.

Sioux just can't resist checking out Erin's find.

This is your brain on anatomy.

What did you guys do to Dr. P?

Vet Med includes counting sheep.

How to pick a brain: Step One.

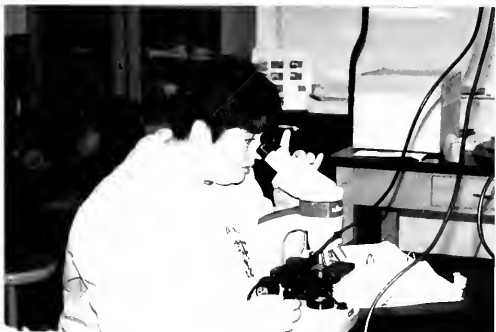

Let me consult the magic box.

How 'bout a kiss?

Tell me you're seeing the same thing I do.

Darn, more plant fibers.

Maybe if I keep looking I'll find something.

'Twas The Night Before Finals by Sioux

'Twas the night before finals and all through the house,
The students were cramming, "Its a fluke, no a louse."
The flashcards were hung near the lamplight with care,
In hopes that some memory would seep from their wear.

The lazier students were snug in their beds,
While visions of passing danced 'round in their heads.

Girls in their jammies and guys in whatever,
Chewed on their fingers and prayed for bad weather.
Then out at the college there arose such a clatter,
We drove up the road to see what was the matter.

Away to the kennel we flew like a flash,
And there were the teachers throwing a bash.
Lori was dancing with the beagles below,
Dr. Kuder was laughing at the marvelous show.
When what to our wondering eyes should appear,
Dr. P. with a cocktail and a fluffy white beard.

More rapid than eagles the teachers all came,
Dr. P., he was shouting as he called them by name.
"Now Lori, now Kuder, now Bradford, and Kim,
On Sally, on Nancy, where the hell is that Jim?"

And then in a twinkling we saw on the roof,
Jim prancing and pawing with ole ninety proof.
As we drew back our heads and were turning around,
Down through the scavenger he came with a bound.

A bundle of papers he flung 'round his neck,
Held questions that came from his math'matics text.
And Sally's eyes twinkled as she carried hers in,
"It's all their misfortune." She said with a grin.

Mr. B. snickered over a slow gin fizz,
"I'll have them all crying over my little quiz."

Mrs. Robinson shook with a hearty laugh,
That shook her garter clear down to her calf.
"I've blood smears and blood cells, urinalysis, too,
If that's not enough to make class come unglued."

And there by the doorway stood Kim at her fate,
Wondering which new dog would have to lose weight.

Lori was tapping a cold can of beer,
Thinking "Red paper will evoke the most fear."

Dr. Kuder was busy as she went to work,
Looking for questions where no answers lurk.
She set down her vodka and Elvis came lappin',
He was running in circles, 'fore they knew what had happened.

Dr. P. stood there rocking with a sinister look,
"They've no worry from me, 'cause mines all open book!"
He turned to the teachers, wiped his nose on his sleeve,
"Drink up my dear fellows, we'll be taking our leave."

They sprang across campus to five waiting cars,
All seeing double, a few seeing stars.
And we heard them exclaim as they drove out of sight,
"Go to bed now you suckers and turn out the light!"

Palmolive dishwashing soap is great for your hands.

One of these days I'll figure this thing out.

I wonder if somebody sent me more candy for my candy jar.

Sally's banana dress.

Do you ever feel like you're being watched?

Did you ever feel like Death is creeping up on you?

What in the world are you talking about Mr. B?

Kim shows the students what not to do during lecture time.

Louie really dives into what he's doing.

If you can't take the heat, get away from the autoclave.

Alright, we have to beat Sally to the food vendors—you go north.

Do you ever feel like school is a zoo?

Don't even think about it.

Maybe if I ignore them, they'll go away.

David looks bright-eyed and bushy-tailed doing cat wards.

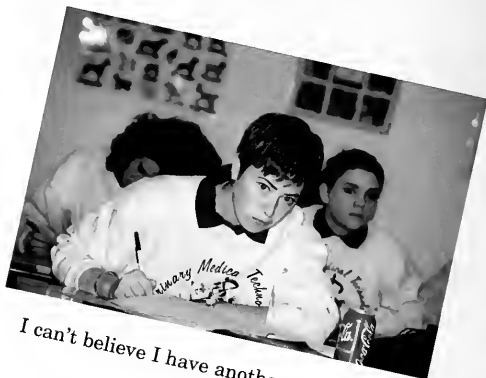

That dress is definitely you!

What's that ticking noise?

Students enjoying a rare moment of sunshine.

I can't believe I have another year of this!

How much can I cram in two hours?

I got a cramp in my hand from that test.

Study, study, study! That's all we ever do!

It's two o'clock in the morning and we still don't know this stuff.

We really are using this time to study.

Go ahead...Ask me anything about Parasitology!

Do the words far out, groovy and fashion suicide come to mind?

Well, ya don't say!

Come home with me...Mama will feed us!

Terri managed to find herself a special friend.

Never fear, Rin Tin Tin is here!

Does the Vet Tech student's day ever end?

What did you get for number five?

Let's pack it up and go home!

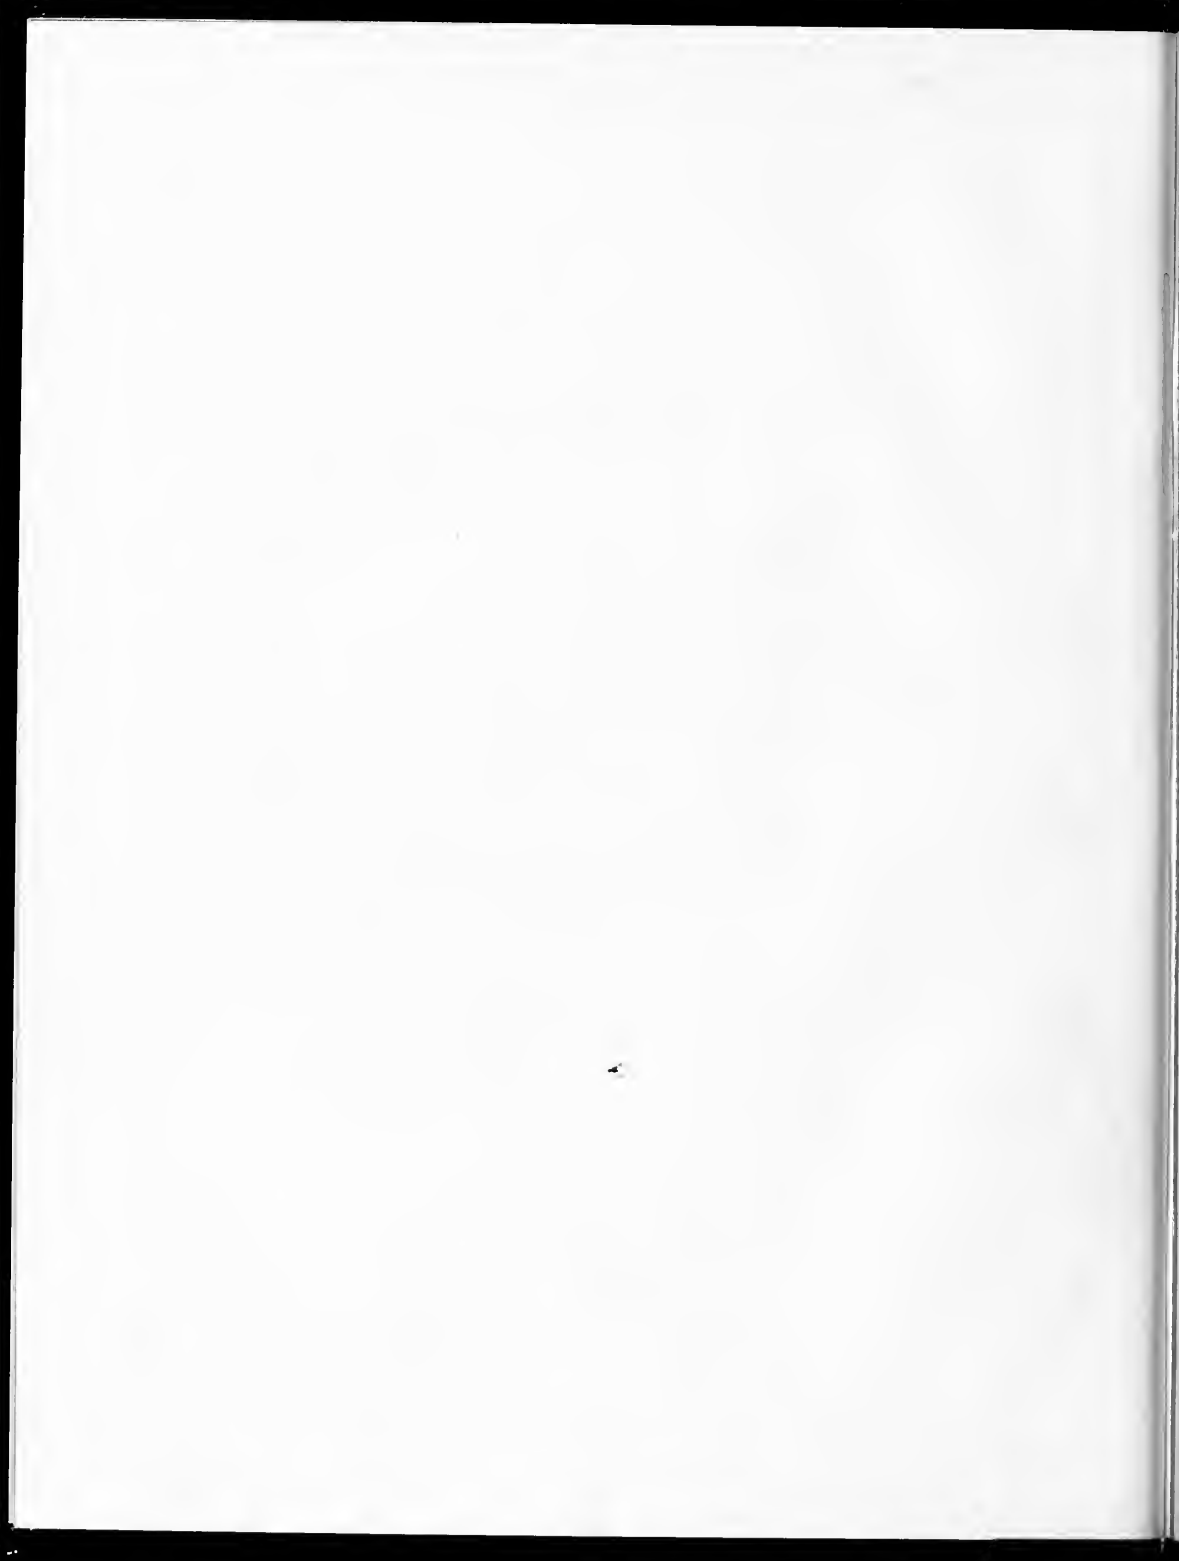

The Yearbook Staff (most of us, anyway)

Thanks to ALL who helped put this book together!
